TUESDAY APRIL 22.

A PROCLAMATION.

BY THE GOVERNOR.

By an enactment of the Legislature of Wisconsin, the Executive is authorized to designate a day to be known as Arbor Day, to be observed by the people of this state in planting trees for the benefit and adornment of school and public grounds.

Now, therefore, I, William D. Hoard, Governor of the State of Wisconsin, do appoint and designate Tuesday, the 30th day of April, as Arbor Day, and I do request all schools and colleges to observe the same by "suitable exercises, having for their object the imparting of knowledge of horticulture in the department known as arboriculture in the adornment of school and public grounds," and further recommend that the day be a holiday in all schools and colleges in promoting the objects of the law.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand, and caused the great seal of the State of Wisconsin to be affixed. Done at the capitol, in (GREAT SEAL) Madison, this eighteenth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-nine.

PROHIBITION DEFEATED.

The people of Massachusetts voted on the question of prohibition on Monday. The proposition to amend the constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors, goes down to defeat under the weight of some 30,000 or 40,000 majority against it. The result will surprise a good many friends of temperance who will deeply regret the outcome of the contest. There certainly was no sentiment in Massachusetts favorable to constitutional prohibition. (Towns like Worcester, Springfield, Holyoke, gave very large majorities against the amendment. Boston gave some 20,000 against it.)

There are some features of the contest in Massachusetts over the prohibitory amendment that are interesting and worthy of serious consideration. The Gazette published the other day a statement of the condition of the sentiment in that state among the clergy. It was shown by the article then published that very many of the leading clergymen of the state were opposed to the amendment. The ground on which this objection is based was that they did not believe prohibition was the best way to deal with the liquor traffic. The experiences of other states led them to arrive at this conclusion. Among this class of opponents were some of the most noted ministers and college professors in Massachusetts. They are of the opinion that high license, with stricter regulations regarding the sale and the issuing of license, will do more good work for the cause of temperance than prohibition where there is not public sentiment sufficient to enforce it.

When the churches divided on this great question it betrays a misfortune to the cause of constitutional prohibition.

ARBOR DAY.

The Gazette publishes to-day Governor Hoard's proclamation appointing Tuesday, April 30, a day to be observed as arbor day, and that the day shall be devoted to the imparting of knowledge of arboriculture in the adornment of schools and public grounds. The day is also designated as a holiday in all schools and colleges for the purpose of promoting the objects of the recent law on the subject, enacted by the late legislature.

The term arboriculture is comparatively new in the language of agriculture. It is now employed to designate the modes of cultivating and perfecting trees, shrubs, and vines for fruit bearing, ornament, hedges, shelter, and so on. The result has been wonderfully successful wherever arboriculture has been engaged. This is especially so in the new states. There are thousands of acres of free land in Nebraska, and Kansas that were planted a few years ago by settlers. Michigan is paying considerable attention to arboriculture with most encouraging results. Wisconsin has been backward in this branch of industry. Tree culture has been reduced to a science by the experiments, observations, and investigations that have been going on in this country.

What is needed at present is a more intelligent understanding in regard to the kind of trees, shrubs, and so on, to plant, what is the most serviceable as shelter, or ornament, or more likely to withstand the ravages of insects or the varying temperature of the climate. The whole question is one of especial interest, and it is hoped that the people will properly observe the day.

The following item regarding a very important industry, is worth recording: "A beet-sugar factory in Watsonville, Cal., was in operation 61 days last year, consuming 14,677 tons of beets and producing 1,640 tons of sugar. It paid an average price of $5.04 per ton for beets; the cost of manufacturing the 1,640 tons of sugar was $148,247, and the sale of the product brought $172,817, making a net profit of $24,570, or 5 per cent on the capital invested. The factory, during its operation, gave employment to 135 men. Its capacity has since been doubled. The farmers who sold the beets are reported to have cleared from $40 to $45 an acre for their crop."

Public indignation is aroused in Pennsylvania over the case of a boy only fourteen years old who is confined in Moyamensing prison upon a judgment of $500 in a civil suit. A petition is in circulation for the abolition of imprisonment for debt of defendants under the age of twenty-one. What is the matter with Pennsylvania that has not abolished the old law long ago? No state, alive to the civilization of the time, can afford to imprison for debt.

Reports from the principal corn-growing states, compiled by the Farmers' Review, of Chicago, represents that there is still remaining in the hands of the farmers about one-third of the large corn crop harvested last fall.

The detail report of quantities unsold is as follows: Ohio, 39,000,000 bushels; Indiana, 51,000,000; Illinois, 95,000,000; Iowa, 107,000,000; Missouri, 64,000,000; total for seven states, 378,000,000 bushels.

THE HOHENZOLLERN RING.

A Curious Superstition Concerning The German Royal Family.

From the "Life of Emperor William" One morning of the winter of 1885, in the Adjutant's chamber of the royal palace, the royal treasurer, Mr. Geisinger, entered, carrying a long, doubly sealed package. The address on the package, written by King Frederick William IV., was in effect: "I have opened this package in the presence of my sister Louise of the Netherlands, taken cognizance of its contents, and then sealed it again with my seal, thereupon restoring it for safe keeping to the Prince Wittgenstein." A few days afterward there was found accidentally in the manuscript collection of the Berlin Royal Library, in an old folio volume, entitled "Alchemy of the Old Electors and Various Other 'Superstitions,'" a notice that King Frederick II., at the commencement of his reign, had, among various other things, also found a little box containing a ring with a black stone and a slip of paper by King Frederick I., on which was written about the following: "This ring has been given to me by my father, of blessed memory, upon his death bed, with the remark that so long as this ring shall be preserved in the house of Brandenburg this would not only grow but increase and thrive visibly." Another notice, referring apparently to the same ring, said: "It is said that a princely person has brought a large toad set in upon the Princess, who was at that moment in child's robes; this toad vomited forth a golden ring, mounted with one diamond and two rubies. This ring is still at present transmitted to the first born of the house to the memory and intended good fortune and preservation of the crown."

Rumor has connected this ring with one said to have been drawn from the dying King Frederick William II.'s finger by the Countess Lichtenau. This says that luck left the Hohenzollerns in 1806, when the Countess possessed herself of the ring; she was treated harshly and unjustly by Frederick William III., and when finally she returned it in 1818 for a life pension, she accompanied it. When she took the ring from the dying King's finger he exclaimed, feebly: "Her den ring" (return the ring); it was overheard by other persons, and the wily Countess said the King had expressed a desire for her ring.

The late Emperor William was thoroughly free from mysticism, yet, from his manner of talking on this subject, he appeared as if he placed implicit faith in the power of the ring credited to it, by the accompanying notices and remarks by his ancestor.

WHAT THE GERMANS EAT.

Just Testifies Countess Said to Mix Her Food with Their Sauce.

The amount of animal food disposed of in the German capital is such that, divided equally among the population of the city, it yields an allowance of two and a half pounds of meat a week for every man, woman, and child in the place, including infants in arms, members of the legislature, and paupers. In other words, says the London Telegraph, each citizen Berliner—irrespective of age, sex, or political opinion, is officially credited with the consumption of 141 pounds weight of beef, mutton, veal, pork, lamb, and horse-flesh per annum. "A few days ago, 7,000 horses are slaughtered yearly for the Berlin meat market, their flesh being sold partly as butchers' meat," in shops specially affected to the retail trade of "pferde-fleisch," and partly "worked up" into sausage, a popular variety of which is hawked "all hot" about the street late in the evening and during the hours of the early morn. Poor Prussians are much addicted to horse-flesh stewed in a savory sauce; nor do the well-to-do disdain it as an occasional viand and served under its own name. In Germany, Italy, and even France, the flesh of horses and asses is unquestionably "converted into sausages," like unto the aged hero of one of Samuel Butler's most gruesome cognates in vast quantities, and appears to them close texture, rich color, and aromatic flavor, in particular to Brunswick "wurst," "maternity of belongs," and "succulent de Lyon." The bulk of the substance to which these dainties owe their being, however, is pork fresh or salted; and in all probabilities the 4,700 pigs that annually pay the debt of nature in tribute to Berlin's appetites find their way to the table in the shape of either sausage or ham; for Prussians rarely eat roast pork or fried ham, whereas they are never weary of smoked and cured preparation of pig. Besides devouring this porcine host, Berlin stands accountable yearly for a violent death of 127,000 head of cattle, 131,000 calves, and 346,000 sheep, besides a multitude of minor animals, all of which vanish in due course down her capacious maw.

Care of the Hand.

With care the hand may be kept smooth, even by those who handle the dishcloth. For cleansing the hands use a little of the hand soap, or a little ammonia or borax in the water they are washed in. Be careful to dry them thoroughly every time they are washed, and then apply a little vasoline or cold cream, wiping the hands after the application. Oxalic acid, in a weak solution will remove stains, or, what is better, a bit of lemon, for oxalic acid is poison, and must be permitted to touch an abraded part of the skin. At night rub oatmeal over the hands and wear a pair of gloves a size or two large. This is especially for those who, after housework, sit down to the piano or occupy themselves with the sewing or silk embroidery.

A Human Almanac.

Ray Odenweller, a 10-year-old boy who lives in Bro. n county, Illinois, is a human almanac. Give him any date in any month of this year, last year, or next year, and he can not only tell you the day of the month, but he will tell you the day of the week, and he will tell you the day of the month.

Premonitions.

SAFE ON DRY LAND AGAIN.

ARRIVAL OF PART OF THE DANMARK'S PASSENGERS.

The Missouri's Captain Tells the Story of the Accident and the Rescue.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 23.—The steamship Missouri, with 365 of the people from the wrecked steamer Denmark, arrived at the American Line steamship company's dock at 6 o'clock Monday evening. All of the Denmark's passengers look hearty and bright, and show no signs of the hardships which they must necessarily have endured. Among those on board from the Denmark's company were Purser Hempel, Ship's Physician, Stewardess Mrs. Nelson, Baker John Lundquist, Butler Gustavson, Emigrant Stewardess Mrs. Christianson, and Walter William DeWalt, eight in all. General Passenger Agent John Bath of the Thimble line came from New York to make arrangements for the comfort of the people for the unfortunate Denmark. He said that all would be forwarded to their destination from this city if satisfactory arrangements could be made. Nearly all the emigrants are from points in the West.

Capt. Merrill's Story.

Capt. Hamilton Merrill, commander of the Missouri, made the following statement: "We left London with a general cargo for our first trip to Philadelphia on March 28. We were under way for 12 days, and on April 5, when we sighted the steamer Denmark flying a signal of distress. The wind at the time was blowing strong from the west. We bore down on the steamer and her disabled. Her commander reported that the tail end of his shaft was broken and he wished me to take his passengers to New York. Owing to the state of the weather and the condition of the steamer, it was impossible to accommodate such a number of people I declined to accept his request, but offered instead to tow his vessel to the nearest port. The offer Capt. Knudsen accepted, and at 2:30 p. m., or two hours after we first sighted the Denmark, we placed a tow rope on board that vessel and proceeded, turning to the starboard and heading northwest for St. Johns, N. F., which was considered the best port to make under the circumstances. The wind blew with tremendous force all night and progress was most difficult. On April 6, at 5:30 a. m., finding that I could make no headway in a westerly direction, and seeing ice to windward, I decided to abandon my hope of reaching St. Johns, and determined to make for St. Michaels, one of the Azores islands. I signaled my determination to the captain of the Denmark and he agreed that this was the best course to pursue, and on our hour later we squared away for St. Michaels. At 7 p. m. the Denmark signaled to us: 'We are leaking considerably, there is now three feet of water in the aft-hold, and is gaining rapidly.' I asked what I should do and the signal came: 'Keep on towing.'

The Denmark Sinking.

"At 9:30 a. m. the Denmark again signaled us. This time the signal read: 'The Denmark is sinking; we must abandon the ship. Will you take our passengers?' Without a moment's hesitation I signaled: 'Yes, I will take all on board, do the best I can.' I then cut the tow line and we dropped down to the Denmark. Chief Officer Glen of that vessel came on board the Missouri and informed me of the condition of his ship. He said that although the weather at the time was fine Capt. Knudsen had decided that for the best interests of those on his ship it would be better to abandon her and get all the people on board the Missouri while there was plenty of time. At 9:30 a. m. we launched our two life-boats, in charge on the second and third officers, and these two boats proceeded to the Denmark. In the meantime seven of the sinking steamer's boats were manned by the crew of that steamer and the work of transferring the passengers began.

"A heavy swell was running during all of this terrible day, making the work of removing the people from the sinking ship one of great difficulty, and it was only by the aid of the life-boats that we were able to avoid accidents both to the people and to the boats. The women and children were removed first, and after them the passengers and crew. The officers of the Denmark remained on board the vessel. At 2 p. m. we finished the work of transferring the passengers, having consumed nearly five hours and getting everybody with the exception of the crew safely on the Missouri without a single accident of any kind. About an hour later the barometer began falling, the weather was coming in thick and looking dirty, and I sent word to Capt. Knudsen and his faithful officers to leave the ship and come on board the Missouri, and after getting some provisions from the Denmark, which had now tilted very perceptibly, we started toward St. Michaels, made us fearful of the Missouri overcrowded.

"I then counted heads and found we had on board, in addition to our own crew of forty-five men and four passengers, 659 cabin and steerage passengers and sixty-nine of the officers and crew of the ill-fated steamer. Our last view of the Denmark showed that vessel to be rapidly going down, her stern being almost level with the sea, and the water was breaking over her. We threw overboard most of our deck cargo, consisting principally of baled rags, in order to make room for the accommodation of the large addition to our passenger list.

"On looking over our provisions we found, after a careful estimate of the number of mouths we had to feed, we had only enough food on board to last three days, and I decided to make all possible haste to reach the port of St. Michaels, which was 720 miles away.

"We had started for St. Michaels with all on board at 5 p. m. of the 6th. The weather was very stormy at the time, and the wind increased in violence as the night wore on. The gale kept increasing in fury and there was a tremendous sea running, which continually broke over the vessel and took altogether things looked dubious. It must be remembered that we were very short of provisions, and that the storm, at the very outset of our journey toward St. Michaels, made us fearful of reaching that port safely.

"By daylight of April 8, however, the gale had materially decreased and we were able to make fair progress. The 9th went by without incident and at 9:30 a. m. of April 10 we arrived at St. Michaels. On April 11 at 11 a. m. we landed 370 of the passengers and crew of the Denmark, including Capt. Knudsen, at St. Michaels. At 6 p. m. of the same day we sailed from St. Michaels with 365 people from the Denmark, including eight of the crew of that vessel, who were allowed to come with us. We had fine weather all the way to Philadelphia and a remarkably small amount of sickness on board, considering the crowded condition of our boat. We had plenty to eat on the voyage from St. Michaels here, having taken on a supply at that place amply sufficient to last us."

Will Hold Special Services.

LONDON, April 23.—Dispatches from Denmark and Sweden say the news of the safety of the Denmark's passengers was received with great expressions of joy in those countries. Many pathetic scenes occurred at the offices of the company when the news was confirmed. Services of thanksgiving will be held in many of the churches.

Big Wreck at Worcester, Mass.

WORCESTER, Mass., April 23.—One of the early morning freight trains broke in two to-day east of the cut near "Davis' Cottage." The sections then crashed together again fifty feet this side of Harrington street bridge. The result was a wreck and a fire. Four cars were burned. One rolled fifty feet down an embankment. The east track was torn up for 100 feet, the west track for twenty feet. The Worcester fire department responded to a call and put out the flames. At 9:30 o'clock no trains had passed either way, but the tracks will probably be cleared by noon. The railroad men refuse all information. It is not known that anybody was hurt.

THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

Italy Opposed to the Importation of American Pork.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The agricultural department makes public a dispatch from the United States minister at Rome, in which he says he has been unable to obtain the removal of the restrictions against American pork, although Italy is now admitting pork from other countries. The minister adds: "The Italian government, as well as many other European governments, seems to have adopted the strange theory that the production of American meats and breadstuffs in competition with the articles of food produced at home is a calamity to the European producer, and that this calamity is in direct proportion to the cheapness of the food offered. Whether Europeans would also regard it as a calamity if we provided them with food entirely free of charge I will not undertake to say."

ADMIRAL PORTER APPOINTED.

He Will Be Grand Marshal of the Naval Display in New York Harbor.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Admiral Porter has been appointed grand marshal in the harbor of New York on the occasion of the centennial celebration. All vessels will be under his orders, and all commanding officers will govern themselves accordingly. The admiral will be in New York navy yard is ordered to co-operate with the Admiral in making the naval display a success.

First Comptroller Dunham Resigns.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—First Comptroller Dunham has severed his connection with the treasury department. He had tendered his resignation on the change of administration, and it was accepted to-day by Secretary Windom, to take effect at once. There are several explanations for this action. The one generally accepted is that the first comptroller had taken a position on several official matters entirely at variance with the views of the present administration. The immediate cause of the change is due to a personal misunderstanding between Attorney-General Miller and the first comptroller in regard to the accounts of Mr. John I. Davidson, supervisor of elections in New York.

The Public Printer.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—It looks more and more like Frank W. Palmer for Public Printer. He has a powerful friend in Assistant Postmaster-General Clarkson. They were boys together in Iowa in days long gone by, and Clarkson is doing all he can for his old friend. The President is kindly disposed to Mr. Palmer and has faith in his ability and integrity. His chances are gaining, and it would be no surprise if he were nominated this week.

Winter Wheat in Illinois.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The agricultural department has just issued the following report in regard to winter wheat in Illinois: "While the date of seeding wheat was delayed on account of the dry weather, very much of the largest part of the crop was sown about the usual time and under conditions quite favorable to germination. The plant has a healthy appearance and seem to be making a vigorous growth."

Easter Monday Egg-Rolling.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The usual Easter Monday egg-rolling, peculiar to Washington, was observed Monday at the White House grounds. Thousands of gayly-dressed children, representing all classes of society, gathered in the grove, rolling Easter eggs down the grassy slopes, and indulging in the first picnic of the season. The President's family watched their gambols from the windows.

ton, of Deper, are guests of Miss Mary

Hayes, fourth ward.

—Pigeons went down before the guns of the Anglemore Club on Bunker

Hill this afternoon.

—Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Miller and daughter left for their new home in Oregon last night at 8:45.

—Janesville City No. 90, I. O.

O. F., occupy Odd Fellows hall this evening—regular weekly meeting.

—The N. O. W. Club will dance at the Armory this evening. Smith & Anderson's orchestra will furnish the music.

—Mrs. J. M. Bostwick was reported

this afternoon as resting a trifle easier

although her condition is still critical.

—Oriental Lodge No. 22, Knights of Pythias, assemble in regular weekly meeting this evening—Lodge room in the Jeffers block, West Milwaukee street.

—Charles Skelly is making preparations for the erection of store property

on Jackson street in the rear of R. W.

McLellan's drug store.

—Col. Nicholas Smith, of the Gazette,

spoke to a large audience at the First Congregational church, La Crosse, Sunday evening, on the "Masterpieces in Hymnology."

—Mr. I. C. Brownell is removing his family to-day to their new home in Forest Park, taking possession of the Conrad house lately purchased by Mr.

Brownell.

—An Indian from one of the northern reservations furnished Herb Allen with pointers on spring styles to-day by pa-

radizing Milwaukee street in a cut away

coat and buckskin moccasins.

—Do not forget the special services at Court Street M. E. church this week.

Preaching every light except Saturday and prayer meeting each afternoon of the same days at 8 o'clock.

—Robinson & Leffingwell's saloon in the Myers House block has been sold to

M. M. Farley of Monroe. Mr. Farley

has been in the city for several days past.

The sale was made last evening and he takes possession at once.

—The ladies of the Presbyterian church will give a musical to-morrow evening at the home of Deacon F. S. Eldred, Jackson street. A choice programme has been prepared. Admission 15 cents.

All are cordially invited.

—The Janesville Concordia Society

entertained a large number of their friends at Concordia hall last evening by a social dancing party. Prof. Luckwood's orchestra furnished the music, and the party was enjoyed by all.

—A telephone message was received in the city this afternoon stating that Mrs.

Alvira Wheelock, of Rockford, formerly of this city, was lying at the point of death in that city, and not expected to survive many hours. Mrs. Wheelock has been an invalid for several years, but particulars of her present ailment are not stated.

—The Bazaar sale and supper at All

Souls church parlors yesterday afternoon and evening, under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of that church, was a gratifying success to all. The ladies displayed a choice collection of articles which were placed on sale, and the supper was all that could be desired. There was a good attendance and all enjoyed the affair.

—There was a large gathering of young people at the social dancing party given by the St. Patrick's A. & B. Society

last evening in Hibernia hall. The young people gathered for a good time and they had it. Smith & Anderson's orchestra furnished excellent music for the dance, and the large party retired to their homes at a late hour well pleased

at the evening's enjoyment.

—The Mitchell-Robyns Comedy company drew a fair sized audience at Lap-pin's Opera House last evening, and the play, "Shadrack Jones" was ably presented by the company. The company is a strong one, and will no doubt receive a liberal support during their brief stay in this city. To-night "Our Boys" will be presented. Popular prices. Fill the house.

—The funeral of the late Mrs. Daniel

Ford, of the town of Rock, was held from St. Patrick's church yesterday, the Rev. Father McGinnity conducting the services, which were listened to by a large number of friends. At the conclusion of the services the remains were taken to Mount Olivet cemetery for interment, the pall bearers being Messrs.

Patrick Skelly, J. Powers, J. Callahan,

L. Bennett, Wm. Ford and T. Welch.

—"Billy Faulkner," the traveling representative of the Chicago Inter Ocean, struck the city this morning. Faulkner is a hustler in the way of securing subscriptions, and is a genial fellow to meet.

He will tarry in the city two or three days, stopping at the European hotel, with John Kenyon. When you see the chap wearing a frontpiece on his hat

bearing the letters in gold, "Billy Faulkner, representing the Chicago Inter

Ocean," be prepared to subscribe.

—The Mitchell-Robyns Comedy Co.

now occupying Lappin's opera house,

comes to Janesville backed by the best of press notices, and is a combination of real merit. The company made their first appearance here last evening and won much praise for their clever work.

They will remain during one week, and it is a combination which will grow in public favor as their visit is prolonged.

—"Our Boys" will be presented this evening, and as popular prices rule the day—

10, 20 and 30 cents—the house will be crowded.

Take it in Time.

A SUBSTANTIAL TRIBUTE.

AN EASTER CONTRIBUTION OF NEARLY

SEVEN HUNDRED DOLLARS AT TRINITY.

The Easter service at Trinity church

is entitled to a more extended notice

than could be given in last evening's

Gazette. Under the faithful and efficient pastorate of the rector, the Rev. James Siddell, the church has steadily gained in strength and the Easter offering amounted to the handsome sum of $660, placing the church practically out of debt.

The services of the day were largely attended and the song service was particularly choice and well rendered. The</
